It is that with the landing of the Pilgrims that they began the education of their children. They built the church and the school house side by side. In the fear of God they educated their children. They taught that there was no distinction among men save that of character.

In the old log school house went the rich man's son and the poor man's daughter. They had the foundation of our great free school system which has permeated every part of this great nation and is now so firmly interwoven that it has become a part of the government itself.

A few months since a dastardly foreign foe with a malicious heart fired the mine that sent one of our gallant battle ships to the bottom of the ocean. The nation stung to arms. They rallied from the hillside and they gathered from the plain. Side by side went the boys that wore the blue and the boys that wore the grey. They sang as they went, not "Marching Through Georgia" but "Marching Through Cuba." There was much speculation as to the probable result of the conflict. Many contended that Spain had a powerful navy, that her soldiers were well drilled and accustomed to hardships. But the American navy was swept from the face of the earth. How shall we account for this seeming unequal warfare?

Will anyone say that the powder in the Spanish cannons was less powerful than that of the Americans? Will anyone say that the ocean was less kind to them than to us? Will anyone say that the sun gave its light for us and did not for them? None of these things. Then what is the answer to the question? The answer is simple and plain. It was an educated army against an uneducated army. It was educated American men against uneducated American men.

It was American gunnery against uneducated American gunnery. In short, it was ignorance pitched against intelligence. The result was the same which must inevitably follow when ignorance is pitted against intelligence, whether it be on the field of battle or in life's earnest struggle. Ignorance must always give way before intelligence. American soldiers, American statesmen, American orators and American scientists have been pitted against those of other nations and have always proved themselves to be more than a match for their adversaries. Why, then, is it because the Americans are a less brave and more intelligent people than the rest of the world?

I plead for the education of the farmer's children because of its national importance. What girl of all girls has such an opportunity of studying nature and nature's God as has the farmer's daughter? Whether she walks by the babbling brook where the water strolls in the solitude of the forest, whether she walks in meadows green and singing birds and blooming flowers where the sun basks the sun by day and the moon and stars by night, by the aid of education she can spell out the hand that made us is Divine.

nation as to their duties by calling upon the board of the state institute. The president of the state horticultural and state dairyman associations and the president of the state board of agriculture are members of the state board. It was stated that the legislature had done much to help the state institute. Since the act creating the state institute many county organizations have been formed and this year an institute will be held in every county in the state and speakers of a high order will appear before the farmers. The directors of the state institute have visited nearly every county institute in their district.

Mr. Mills in his paper referred to the benefits of the institutes and of the work done by the state directors. The fact was also mentioned that at the last meeting of the state institute the wives of the farmers formed a society of domestic economy and reference was made to the establishment of the state agricultural college.

EVENING SESSION.

Addresses by Mrs. G. A. Waring and Joseph Carter, of Normal.

At the session held Wednesday evening the Presbytery Sunday school orchestra was present and rendered music. Mrs. G. A. Waring of Petersburg read a paper on the subject "How Can the Farmer's Wife Help Pay the Mortgage?" She suggested that in order to help the farmer, the wife must stock her home with sunshine and glad nature, in order that her husband might be encouraged. She must economize and use chickens, ducks and geese to supply the table. It was also suggested that the woman on the farm could make quite a good deal of money by selling butter and garden products. She should look after all the details and help in every way in the conduct of the farm.

Miss Jessie Nichols rendered a piano solo and Miss Caldwell of New Holland gave a recitation.

Talk on Clover.

The speaker of the evening was Joseph Carter of Normal, who talked on "Clover." He told of his experiments with clover and said that there was nothing like it to enrich the soil and explained why this was so. He said that clover was valuable for the soil because it went down so deep, killed weeds and is a valuable forage crop. He told about how it should be fed to cattle and hogs and then gave some points in regard to planting and harvesting. The speaker said that he raised clover in order to get a good foundation for his corn crop.

LAST DAY SESSION.

Speeches Delivered by Prof. Blair and Mrs. Pervance.

The forenoon session today opened with singing by the school children. There was quite a large attendance. Superintendent E. A. Gastman announced that the National Educational Association would meet at Los Angeles, California, July 1 to 12, and that the national officers would spend a few days in Decatur.

Mrs. Pervance

Was introduced and spoke on the subject of "Practical Butter Making." She said that a farmer milking five or six cows should use a separator and a butter churn. She said that the separator should be used first and the churn should be used last. She said that the separator should be used first and the churn should be used last.

that butter coloring did not taste and would not hurt any one and that the butter when colored could be sold, whereas if it was white it could not be sold. There was quite a discussion as to the breeds of cattle. It was stated that the Herefords were as good butter cows as the Shorthorns or Jerseys. Mrs. Pervance said that a separator saved enough cream in a year to pay for it.

R. M. Bell wanted to know what the coloring matter was made of. Mrs. Pervance said some of it is made of carrots. Mr. Bell and Mr. Pervance said it was guaranteed to be vegetable.

Mrs. P. V. Vance spoke of the butter coloring and said that she used it and was able to sell colored butter where she could not sell the uncolored butter.

CORN CULTURE.

O. J. Avery talked about growing two kinds of corn.

O. J. Avery of Prairie Home was introduced to lead a discussion on corn culture. He said that one of the best ways to grow corn was to plant two kinds of corn, putting only corn on one side of the planter and the late corn on the other side. He planted eight acres of the two kinds of corn. Most all of the corn was well developed and he thought it gave him 10 acres more than any other corn. The object is to mix the pollen at the right time. Mr. Avery said he didn't keep old blue grass pasture, but had new mow over two years as he could get more out of the land by changing it.

APPLES IN ILLINOIS.

Address by Prof. Blair, of Champaign Delivered To-Day.

President P. A. introduced Prof. Blair of the University of Illinois. He took the place of Prof. Burrill, who was unable to be present. The subject was "Apples in Illinois." He said the culture of apples in Illinois had been slow because fruit growing had not been given much attention. He said in part:

"In order to have good trees they must be well cultivated and the operation of spraying is essential at the times when fungus growth is likely to develop. The true cause of the premature dropping of the apples this year was an attack of the scab on the young apples. If it had been due to imperfect pollination the apples would have been one-sided and deformed."

It is more study that the fruit growers of Illinois need. There are many causes of the failure of apples and other orchard crops. One thing may cause a failure this year and something else next year. It pays the farmer to study these things and learn the causes of failures."

Prof. Blair explained the merits of spraying at the experiment station and he said it had been found that the only protection for the Illinois orchard was to spray every year. The speaker told of the different sprays to be used and the manner of spraying. The cultivation of the orchard was discussed. Prof. Blair said that the time to cultivate was before the trees were planted. They should be deep plowed and possibly subsoiled and when the trees are young the ground should be plowed in the spring. The soil must be from cold when the soil is dry. Cultivation lessens the danger of winter injury.

In order to build up the orchard of the state we must not follow the old orchard which were raised under a haphazard system of agricultural practice. The fruit grower should make a study of his business. He should know how to prepare the soil to receive the trees and how to care for the ground after the trees are planted. It has been proven that fruit growing can be made successful in Illinois. For those who wish to study the subject and are willing to learn. In answer to a question Prof. Blair said that after six or eight years' corn culture the orchard should be discouraged. Small fruits can be grown for not more than three years in the orchard. Oranges cannot be grown for even one year in the orchard and what crops are grown should be rotated. Apple trees should never be planted in a field in which a peach and plum tree should not be planted between the rows of apple trees.

Prof. Blair said it was impossible to say what variety should be grown. This was a matter which must be governed by the locality and market. Never have clover in a bearing orchard as it stimulates growth too much and lessens the bearing but in some cases clover in the young orchard will be of advantage. If one is in the apple business on a commercial basis it is necessary to cultivate the orchard. March is the best time to prune an orchard.

Prof. Blair said he had visited many orchards in the state and had found that the farmers had not realized that they must cultivate to prevent the evaporation of moisture. Mulching the orchard will take the place of

EAGAN'S TESTIMONY

Evidence Before the Famous Court Martial.

AN AGGRAVATED OFFICIAL

Days of Excitement and Continuous Worry for the Commissary General Prosecution Closed—Friends of Eagan Testify

WASHINGTON, January 26.—When the Eagan court martial assembled today Judge Advocate Davis admitted the testimony of General Miles as an exhibit in the trial and with this the prosecution rested its case.

In the Washington court for General Eagan and several exhibits in connection with the testimony read yesterday. This included the correspondence between General Miles and General Eagan, in which the latter asked whether the interviews published in New York in which General Miles severely criticized the commissary general's department and authoritative extracts from the alleged interviews were also submitted as a part of the record.

Col. W. L. Alexander of the substance department, testified for the defense that on the morning that General Eagan gave his testimony before the war investigating commission, he had showed signs of great excitement. His manner was so excited that he named Colonel Davis of the commissary department, whether the general was not ill. He had been intimately connected with General Eagan but had never before seen him in such a condition.

Col. George B. Davis, assistant to the commissary general Eagan, testified that he had been very closely associated with General Eagan for several months. On the day that General Miles gave his testimony before the war investigating commission, General Eagan, as soon as he saw the published statement of his testimony, became excited and in a few minutes went on the next morning to the court martial. He could not attend to the routine duties of the office. Later General Eagan reached such a state that he could not attend to any business. The day before General Eagan appeared before the commission he read his statement over to the witnesses who urged him to modify it somewhat, but he wouldn't listen and walking up and down the stairs he would not change a word of it. It was then a very nervous state. Newspaper clippings were constantly being received criticizing General Eagan.

The greatly excited Eagan went on the next morning to the court martial. Some of these clippings were read to him and General Eagan was a nervous man. He said that he had not been in a very nervous state for some time. He said that he had not been in a very nervous state for some time.

THAT CIVILIZATION

In the days of the Civil War, the question of the rights of the colored people was a very important one. It was a question that divided the nation and that has not yet been settled. This was a great wrong and it is our duty to right it.

Suffering humanity should be supplied with every means possible for its relief. It is with pleasure we publish the following. This is to certify that I was a terrible sufferer from Yellow Jaundice for over six months and was treated by some of the best physicians in our city and all to no avail. Dr. Bell, our druggist, recommended Electric Bitters and after taking two bottles I was entirely cured. I now take great pleasure in recommending them to any person suffering from this terrible and deadly disease. I am gratefully yours M. A. H. K. G. L. King and C. L. Shilling, Druggists.
